A LOYAL TRINITARIAN. In loving memory of John Bugden, No war shall mar our peace, who died at Trinity. March 8th 1916, on behalf of his son Thomas who is serving in the Royal Navy.

Father, when last we parted. I little thought that we Should never meet on earth again Each other's face to see. You sent me at my country's call, Though you in sickness lay, And prayed that we might each be spared Till England gained the day

For though you couldn't go to fight As other men could go, You sent me forth your only son. To do my "bit" for you. And though it meant a sacrifice And many a tear stained eye You bade me do my duty, And not be afraid to die.

But death has claimed you, father A hero brave and true. Faithful to your country You did what you could do. You will not be remembered For victories you have won, But your country you have honoured By sending forth your son.

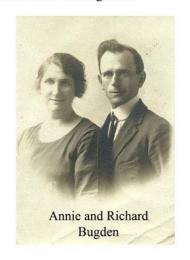

Farewell, farewell dear father, On earth we'll meet no more, But we shall meet up yonder, When earthly wars are o'er. There we shall know each other, Even as we are now known, And spend a long eternity Around our Master's throne.

There through the countless ages, Our parting shall be over, Our sorrows all shall cease. Our family re-united, Together we shall be, With Jesus and the angels Throughout eternity.

R. BUGDEN.

Thanks to Kyran Dwyer for sending along this poem to us.

It is written by Richard Bugden who was born in Trinity in 1887 to Charles and Selena (Baker) Bugden. Richard served as a Salvation Army Officer in Newfoundland before moving to Ontario in 1922 where he joined the Earlscourt Corp and held the position of young people's sergerant-major for a number of years. He became the first Envoy and joined the group of "Hallelujah Envoys", who were the means of winning many souls. Many of his poems were published in the Salvation Army publication "The War Cry". At the time of his passing in 1963 he was survived by his wife (Annie), one son and five daughters.

A Special to this month's edition By Rick Peddle

When people go through a traumatic experience in life, something way out of their realm, they sometimes suffer from the effects of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder or P.T.S.D. I believe I suffered from it at one time. It was after 9/11. I lived in Manhattan at the time and I volunteered to go down to the Trade Center as did others in my trade. I'm a third generation union Ironworker. My grandfather, after the war, left Lockston and joined the Ironworkers in Brooklyn in 1929. I stayed downtown working there for about 2 weeks. We all at first thought we would be rescuing trapped people. After a week or so it became obvious there would be no survivors. As hard as it was to leave it was harder for me to stay. I imagine I was dealing with survivors remorse as well. But with a wife and a 3 week old baby uptown, our first, I knew enough to know it was time to leave. In order to help with my grief I spent some time writing return letters to the schoolchildren of NYC who wrote countless letters to the people working on the pile. I told them that they too had done their part in healing America. Writing the letters helped me get through what was one of the toughest times of my life.

Coming home to Trinity years later allowed me many opportunities to follow a passion of mine, researching my family's history as well as the history of the Trinity Bight. I was blessed to witness the people of Trinity gather on July 1, Memorial Day, on my first year back. Not yet knowing anyone I stood on the periphery of St Paul's church and watched as the tears fell for folks who were killed in the line of duty 110 years earlier. The profound feelings I had as I walked away from the ceremony has always stuck with me and made me want to learn more of the sacrifices that Newfoundland suffered and any ties that the Bight or my family may have endured.

In doing my research I discovered that my grandfathers cousin, Dorothy Ann Peddle of Lockston, married a fella by the name of George Richard Pardy of Little Harbor Fortune Bay. She married him in September 1915, 12 weeks after he enlisted with the 1st Newfoundland Regiment on July 6, 1915. I don't know how much time the young couple had to spend together before George shipped off but I do know that he was wounded less than a year later, July 1st 1916, in the fighting at Beaumont Hamel. He was sent to a Belgian hospital ship, the Jan Breydel, and brought back to the United Kingdom to recover.

The Evening Advocate was a daily edition of the Fisherman's Advocate a newspaper published in St John's. On December 4th, 1917 the paper published a letter written by George Pardy which read as follows:

Thanks For Socks Dunkeld, Perthshire, Scotland November 4th, 1917

Miss Clarissa T. Winsor.

Dear Friend:- I am glad to inform you that I, George Pardy, of Newfoundland, received a pair of socks bearing your address. God bless you for helping a soldier in this way. The socks were dandy and well worth their passage across the ocean. I offer you my warmest thanks for your kind work and you have done your bit by knitting the socks.

Yours truly,

PTE. GEORGE PARDY

I'm not sure if Pte.Pardy was suffering from P.TS.D. or Shell Shock as it was called then when he wrote that letter. While in no way can I compare what he went through with what I went through, 9/11 almost seems trivial in comparison, I do know I felt a connection while reading the letter from George. When he wrote Miss Winsor that she had "done her bit" by knitting the socks it seems he was going out of his way to make a stranger feel love while surrounded by so much suffering. I can only imagine he needed to bring some good in to the world after witnessing such hate.

A sad irony of the letter is that it was published a day after George died. After leaving Scotland he was back on the front where he was wounded again in the Battle of Cambrai. George was evacuated and died of his wounds on December 5th, 1917. He is buried in Rocquigny-Equancourt Road British Cemetery in Somme, France. His personal inscription reads "I have fought the good fight".

George's widow Dorothy later remarried a man by the name of Robert Anderson and they lived on British Harbor, Trinity Bay. Mrs. Anderson died on August 12, 1995 and is buried at Burgoyne's Cove Anglican Cemetery. Her family placed George's British War Medal in her grave.

Lest we forget.
