Electrical, Plumbing & Heating Contractors

October is fire prevention month.

A fire extinguisher is an important piece of safety equipment that should be in every home. While having one is important it's also necessary to know how to use it. PASS is a useful acronym to help remember the four steps to using a fire extinguisher successfully.

Fire extinguishers should be located on every floor of your home especially the kitchen. Store them where they are easily accessible and everyone should be made aware of their location. Fire extinguishers need to be checked annually and turned upside down and shaken.

Guest Column by Karen Huys

Biodynamic agriculture, based on the work of Rudolph Steiner, teaches us that to grow, we must strive to understand the influences of the sun, moon, stars and planets, and align with the powers, forces and energies of the cosmos. It is a way of harvesting the wisdom of the ancients, and working in harmony with nature, to grow naturally, without the use of synthetic fertilizers, or chemicals of any kind. Generating what we need within the confines of our 'farm' and evolving the skills to grow food, empowers us to become providers, not consumers. We live more in courage and become less dependent on the big business that is driving up food prices and reducing the nutrient value of what we eat.

As Steiner says in his opening lecture on agriculture:

"...we shall never understand plant life unless we bear in mind that everything which happens on the Earth is but a reflection of what is taking place in the Cosmos."

By observing what is growing around us, and asking why, we learn that weeds are great teachers - for they bring to our soil what it lacks - whether that be nutrients, acidity, or pathways to make the soil less compacted. That dreaded stinging nettle we all love to hate is one of the most useful plants in biodynamic gardening and what grows near it thrives. Biodynamic gardening teaches us to make 'tea' with the variety of weeds in our garden, and then dilute it to water our garden. The tea then feeds the soil so that the weeds needn't grow - the tea nourishing the soil in their place. We can use different plants, many of which I have found growing all around here, to make concoctions that aid our crops and protect them from everything from insects to frost.

Through this process we come to appreciate and love what we once hated. We come to appreciate the diversity and abundance of our surroundings, and to harness the energies of the plants in our midst, whilst feeding our bodies, our souls and the earth.

Likewise, we learn that different crops grow better in the company of others and make good "companions" while other combinations have a negating effect, and should not be planted near one another. Because different crops require different nutrients to grow, and different acidity levels, we rotate crops each year, and apply organic amendments such as compost, at the right time. We learn to work in harmony with, and not against, nature.

People like Maria Thun, have invested a lifetime in putting these principles into practice, and as a result, we can use their knowledge to direct our energies in the garden to tasks that best align with what is happening with the planets and the moon.

NOTE: Bible Study is offered every Thursday Morning @ 10:30 am at the Meeting Room at Christ Church, Port Rexton. We are looking at "Women of the Old Testament". All are welcome to join us as we meet together for a time of worship and fellowship.

A biodynamic calendar shows us which days are best suited to which task, and which cosmic events require that we 'rest'. Seeds germinate best in the days leading up to a full moon, and should be sown when the moon is descending - by putting down roots, seeds too are descending! Crops, then, are divided into four categories: root, fruit, leaf or flower. The biodynamic calendar marks, for us, which days are best spent on these corresponding crop categories - we hill up spuds on a root day, but never a leaf day, and plant potatoes at apogee - when the moon is furthest from the earth, under a descending moon.

It has taken me many years to wrap my head around all this, and I have many miles to go, but working with the earth and in harmony with the cosmos has brought great healing, and the food I grow is nourishing and delicious. We all need to eat, and when we eat better food we are better able to nourish our bodies - to keep healthy. We empower ourselves towards life and abundance, toward harmony with our surroundings, and a healthier state of mind.

As the active gardening season winds down, I invite you to join me to learn which days are best suited for harvesting the crops we still have growing, which are best for planting garlic and crops for next year, and, in anticipation of the next growing season, to look at crop rotation - mark what we grew, and where, this year, with an eye to planning what best to plant where next growing season. I can show you the different types of beds we've built with our local lumber.

I'll share my resources with you and where to source biodynamic calendars and books which will help you begin to understand this fascinating way of growing organic food successfully. Life on an island called 'the rock' means that much of our food is brought it from afar. I hope that we can grow the soil, the skills, and the will, to provide food security for ourselves, our communities, and the creatures all around us, so that we all thrive. We can also look at preservation methods for the pantry/ freezer and how to use all of the harvest - like beet and carrot tops. I'll explain 'no till' gardening - building the soil from above, by adding nutrients, like compost, leaf mold, and kelp, to feed the soil and protect it from erosion. The winter winds are coming and we can lay our beds to a long winter's rest, under cover of evergreen branches - the needles of which will mulch the strawberries and deter the abundant slugs and snails.

If you'd like to join me on this journey into knowing and growing, I invite you to meet me at my aspiring biodynamic garden at Maidment House - 4 Dandy Lane, Trinity, across from the post office on Thursday October 3rd, at 6pm. Or reach out to me. I hope we can grow. Together. Karen

September 2024

R. Toope, J. Morris, Eds.

Trinity Historical Society is pleased to present a series of Author Readings this fall in partnership with Breakwater Books. The next reading will be by Clayton B. Smith, author of A Seal of Salvage, and will be presented on September 27th at 5:00 pm at the Lester Garland House. Please see our website and The Trinity Bight Enterprise for more details.

In this edition of our Newsletter, we present the story of the sixth of the men who are remembered on the War Monument in Port Rexton.

As always, the THS welcomes application for membership from anyone interested in the objectives and activities of the Society.

Reuben Ploughman

Reuben Ploughman, the son of Mark Ploughman and Mary Ann Penney, was born at Ship Cove on August 8th, 1895. He died in the sinking of the SS Larchgrove on October 27th, 1918. He was 23.

Family Tree

Reuben, an ex-member of the Royal Navy Reserve, was a crew member on-board the SS Larchgrove (Merchant Fleet Auxillary) in the fall of 1918. The Larchgrove left Seville, Spain carrying a load of pig iron and was part of a convoy when she was struck amidship and cut in two by the USS Hawaiian off Tangiers, Morocco. She sank in less than a minute with the loss of all but 16 of her crew.
